Mārcis Leja is a Professor of Medicine, Director of the Institute of Clinical and Preventive Medicine at the Faculty of Medicine and Lifesciences, University of Latvia, and a consulting gastroenterologist at the Digestive Diseases Centre 'Gastro', Riga, Latvia. He serves as an external advisor to the Minister of health of Latvia in oncology and cancer prevention. His special interest lies in the prevention and early detection of gastrointestinal cancers as well as cancer screening in general. He is the principal investigator of the population-based gastric cancer prevention study GISTAR (www.gistar.eu), scientific coordinator of EUCanScreen Joint Action on cancer screening (https://eucanscreen.eu/) and TOGAS (www.togas.lu.lv) project on gastric cancer screening. He has published more than 220 research papers, 8 book chapters. HI=44. He is a Fellow of Latvian Academy of Sciences, Fellow of American Gastroenterological Association (AGA), and member of the European Helicobacter and Microbiota Study group (EHMG).

The other areas of research interest are related to the use of volatile organic marker (VOC) diagnostic concept in gastrointestinal cancer detection as well as for other conditions, the role of microbiota in health and disease as well as the use of large data for prevention and early detection.